

TKTS

Why is conflict such a common occurrence in many parts of Latin America? What do you think is the next step logical step for many of the governments in the region to take in order to avoid similar futures?

Conflict is such a common occurrence because many people in Latin America are not happy with working conditions, government, etc. The government can make sure people are happy by raising minimum wage, and by not doing things that certain classes of people will be angry about.